

Institute for Social Medicine, Epidemiology and Health Economics (Charité) and IPPNW Germany invite you to Health between Ethics and Economisation

August 5th–11th 2018, Berlin

Dear fellow students, young professionals and friends, the Institute for Social medicine, Epidemiology and Health Economics (Charité Universitätsmedizin Berlin) and IPPNW Germany invite you to a one-week full-time course focusing on Global Health Challenges.

This year's Summer School (August 5th-11th) explores the mechanisms of globalisation, inequality and health. We want to discuss in which ways ethics can help us to work as health professionals and political activists for the health of all. During the week we will learn about the socioeconomic determinants of health, the basics of ethics in the medical and global health field and the role of the neoliberal economy in a globalised world and its effects on health. We will shed light on historical and current fights between peoples' health and corporate interests. Most importantly we will address and discuss possible solutions, looking at examples of „best practices“ in the health sector and will ask (and maybe answer) how we as citizens and members of the health community can have a positive impact.

Participants will gain a thorough understanding of intersections between economization, ethics and health through interactive lectures, workshops, a simulation game as well as skills training.

A one-day Alumni meeting and network conference will be held on August 4th. Based on this years' topic, we will be guided through the day by the theme of climate change, as a thematically nexus to last years' Summer School.

The Alumni Network Conference is meant to be a platform for exchange between participants of previous Summer Schools and the new participants.
